

“CASSANDRA”

CASSANDRA LILLIWHITE WONDERED about all the strange things that happened to her. For example, she had wings. Cassandra’s parents took her to doctors all over the world, thinking something was wrong, but they all said she was perfectly healthy. Her cousin, Jenny, also had this trait, and Cassandra’s sisters, Marina and Jasmine had these wings, too. Also, sometimes her aunt or grandma would tell her things about magic, and then her mom or dad would pull them away, and then tell her that what they said was pure nonsense. That would leave her wondering if magic was real or not. And, her cousin Jenny had been living with her since they were both one, because when Jenny was one, she and her parents had come to live with Cassandra’s family. Plus, they had just arrived at Cassandra’s house the previous night. Cassandra and Marina and Jasmine, were thought as just average girls who lived in America, went to school, and liked magic and fairy tales like any other kid. But not these girls. They loved magic. So anyway, let's skip to Cassandra. One night, Cassandra heard whispering outside her bedroom window. It was her parents, Her aunt, Jenny’s parents, and her grandma, who was supposed to be leaving with her aunt that night. They were arguing about something. She leaned out the window so she could hear better. Her aunt was saying something about magic, and her grandma was saying that the girls should know about it. Her parents were saying that they shouldn't, because then they would get crazy ideas about things and that wouldn't be safe. Well, Cassandra thought she should go to bed anyway. So she did. Well, at least she tried to. She just wasn’t tired. But Cassandra decided she should go to sleep . . .
